“It is so hard to get patients to keep their teeth clean! How can I get them to listen to my advice?” Does it sound familiar?

Oral health is an important part of holistic health. The achievement of oral health requires a combination of prevention and treatment with each complementing one another. Oral healthcare professionals play a pivotal role in both these aspects of patient care.

Effective prevention is anchored upon successful patient counselling bringing about sustainable behavioural and lifestyle changes for a healthier mouth. Motivational interviewing can be used to engage patients and shape effective patient education and behavioural change.
